Maya's Farm utilizes natural, organic/ biodynamic farming methods, that enliven the soil and enrich the nutritional content of the produce.

What is a CSA?

It's a community of health and environmentally conscious people coming together to share the bounties and risks of their local, independent farmer. Each CSA member purchases a share in Maya's Farm's future harvests. As crops mature, you receive a weekly allotment of naturally grown produce. Changing growing conditions throughout the year determine which varieties will be in your share each week. Integrated cropping benefits the soil . . . and eating locally reduces high transportation and storage costs. Part of what the farmer saves goes back into quality production; the rest is passed on to you.

Memberships for the Fall Season, beginning September 18th, are going fast. Don't miss a single basketful of farm-fresh produce! E-mail Maya to request a membership application and detailed information.

Who we are and what we believe

Maya Dailey operates a small, organic/biodynamic market farm located in Phoenix, close to South Mountain Park. The farm produces high-quality, hand-cut produce for restaurants, schools, markets and a small CSA. She believes that fresh, locally-grown, organic produce not only should be in our homes and schools, but should be available to the poor and elderly, as well. "Farming for me is not only economics, but also about being a part of something larger than oneself and trusting and honoring this sacredness."
